Chapter 1 by Fanwizard

Austin and Hope's relationship is perfect. . . .
until it wasn't.

It's been one year since Austin was caught cheating on Hope on the most popular girl in the school, ending their romantic relationship. Even with that, Hope hasn't fallen out of love. Now, Austin and Hope are in the same place for the entire summer, opening their hearts unintentionally, unexpectedly falling for each other. But the one thing that Hope can't do is forget the relationship and summer that they shared last summer.

Chapter 2 by Fanwizard

As much as I hate to admit it, Austin has only gotten more handsome over one summer. And it's not helping he's glancing over at me occasionally.

I take a sip of my watermelon lemon with kiwifruit splash, swirl it a bit, and take another sip. I'm not even sure why I'm here, besides the fact that Camille dragged me here.

Austin's talking with Shawn, who seems to be doing more of the talking than Austin. Austin glances over at me, his dark green eyes a bit curious about why I was standing in a brand new two piece and drinking a rather bland drink.

I start twirling a strand of my newly highlighted hair around my manicured finger, a nervous habit I did too often.

He runs his hand through his hair, looking at me. I watch Austin take off his shirt, revealing his toned arms and washboard abs and tanned skin. He jumps into the pool.

When his head breaks the surface, he glances over at me, flashes a quick, slightly cocky smirk at me, his eyes flashing.

Oh great. He just caught me staring at him like some stalker.

Another great move for Hope.

I have to admit; Even after breaking my heart, cheating on me, then immediately dating the girl who he cheated with, I still loved him.

After weeks of concerned friends and tissues and chocolates, I had managed to lie successfully to my friends (they don't call me an actress for nothin') that I was fine and I might even have a new love interest.

They freaked out, forgot all about Austin, and started giving me a makeover so I could attract him.

That last part was a lie. I never fell out of love with Austin and never fell in love with anyone else. Sure, I went to prom with Scott, a theater guy who was one year older than me, but we went as friends. I kissed him on the cheek at the end of the night, since he was a really great date. And then I found out that I was spending the entire summer with my dad and stepmom. Which just happened to be at the beach.

Where Austin lived.

I finally finished my watermelon drink and took a brief swim. The party was kinda boring, but it got Camille to stop saying I was a stick in the mud.

I noticed Austin had left the party and was on the beach, just sitting in the sand staring at the water. He seemed blank, distant, not the confident charming Austin that everyone knew and loved. And was that regret?

I glanced over at Camille, who was too busy flirting with Shawn, to notice me leave the party and sit down beside Austin.
